"SOCK IT TO ME WEEK" HAD EMPHASIS ON SOCIAL CONCERN

Seven outstanding speakers and a dozen Tar Heel college and university students active in social concern programs were on the Gardner-Webb College campus Feb. 5-7.

Dr. Robert Lamb, director of the successful week's activities, states that the theme "Sock It To Me Week" pointed to activities which opened many eyes to social concerns in Gardner-Webb students. Some of the issues discussed were dehumanization, alienation, de-struction of personality resulting from current problems of social prejudices, and distrust, poverty, overcrowding in the cities and lack of communication between power groups.

Speakers for the week were J. Mason Brewer, a recognized expert in the field of Negro Folklore; Rev. James Y. Gosses, head of the Department of Student Work of the Baptist State Convention of N. C.; Rev. Fred Terry, pastor of West Durham Baptist Church in Durham and recently returned from seven weeks of inner-city work in Chicago; Rev. Alton Y. Burbee, director of Religious Activities at Campbell College and Coordinator of the 1967 Project Nicaragua; Judge Keith Snyder, district judge in Lenoir and a GW graduate; Rev. Gerald Edwards, director of Christian Social Ministries work for the Gaston Baptist Association and Rev. Norman H. Joyner, a member of the N. C. Senate and a Baptist pastor from Statesville.

Students on campus to talk about their various involvements in social programs are: Cam Calhoun, theology student at Duke Divinity School, Paul Washburn, Wake Forest University (a GW graduate and a native of Boiling Springs), Bobby Perrell, president of the BSU at Wake Forest; Ron Joyner, a Morehead Scholar at UNC-Chapel Hill; Ken Andrews, a GW graduate who is a cleric at Wake Forest; Stuart Sproun, chemistry major at Duke University; Omega Wilson, Wake Forest University; David Wagh, English major at Wake Forest; Soony Teague, Wake Forest; Sue Riggs, Wake Forest; David Moore, UNC-Chapel Hill; Bill Hall, Duke Divinity School; Steve James, UNC-Chapel Hill; Bob Harris, a jurist at Duke; Mickey Carr, N. C. State University and Jim Warren, Wake Forest.

Library Makes Giant Strides; Capacity Expected by Mid 1970

Development of a library is a major key in turning the lock to service status accreditation at Gardner-Webb College.

This area has received full attention from the administration, faculty, trustees, and, of course, the library staff. The results have been gratifying in that total volumes in the stacks have doubled from the 23,000 of two years ago to over 40,000 volumes.

Dr. Stanley H. Benson, head librarian, states that volumes are being added at a rate of around 6,000 annually and that, at this rate, the present structure will be at capacity by middle 1970.

In recent reports to the trustees and faculty, Dr. Benson said the college trust now decide on whether to build an addition to the present Dover Building or to construct a new library building.

At this time, Dr. Benson favors a new structure with the possibility that a combination building could be erected. He gave the library-classroom building of another Southern college as an example of good use of space. This is a building which allows use of classroom space during the day and use of this same area during the evenings for library study area.

One of the areas Dr. Benson is proud of is his staff which includes three persons with the M. A. degree in library science. Miss Rebecca Ann Schwadlow, reference librarian, has the M.A. in Library Science from Appalachian State University; Mrs. Joy Sandifer has the M.A. in Library Science from the University of Mississippi and Dr. Benson has the M.L.S. degree from the University of Texas and the Th.D. from Southwestern Theological Seminary. These, along with several dedicated staff members who have years of experience in this field, make the GW library one of the best staffed in the area.

Alumni interested in the progress of the library or who can assist the college in its development are welcome to visit the campus and see new developments underway.

WEBB-KNOLL . . .

Home of the President

LIVING ROOM

Traditional elegance is classically illustrated in the formal living room with Queen Anne period furniture and velvet and French More fabrics in pastel Topsy color tones. Famous Paul Hansen imported crystal lamps with hand-woven silk Shimmering shades contrast the eclectic elegance of the room. Accessories and paintings are hand-picked and custom-framed as needed to coordinate with color tones and feel of the room. The credenza, coffee table and Low Boy are from the James River collection of Hickory Chairs.

DINING ROOM

Just off the living room is the formal dining area. Although not large in size, the room has a festive and intimate atmosphere with its Queen Anne oval table, arm and side chairs custom covered with Mohair stripe and wall covering from the famed Van Lint covering collection. The table, chairs, and corner chairs are from James River-Hickory Chair collection in superb finish on genuine mahogany wood.

DINETTE

Adjacent to the kitchen there is a touch of Old World charm in the dinette area. Here the family enjoys the Temple-Stuart round pedestal table and coordinating chairs finished as Rockport with hand-decorated black trim.

BULLDOG ROOM

Webb-Knoll is a dramatic total blend of informal and formal living. It is a welcome addition to our campus. Located on a wooded knoll in the River Bend Acres development, the new home is the result of a $75,000 grant from the O. Max Gardner Foundation, Inc., in honor of Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Sr.

The approximately 3,000 square feet of the home blends the formality of the living and dining rooms with the striking decor and informality of the Bulldog Room.

It is obviously the result of great planning, care, and imagination by the trustees and the Posen family.

Much of the interior beauty is the result of hard work and planning by Boyce Orinstad of Orinstad's in Bozart City, working with the Posen family. He is a member of the Board of Trustees and a professional interior decorator.

The large, formal master bedroom is made practical and intimate with easy imported access ways expertly picked to coordinate with the mahogany and walnut woods of the Herndon Folio IV furniture. There is a king size bed with case vertical mirror, a chest on chest and two cohesives from Herndon. The desk and chair are from Hickory Chair's James River Collection. Custom upholstered chairs in white wicker with contrasting color walls add an interesting touch to the room.

This formal and feminine bedroom of French in the Blue Master serves as a serene and comfortable retreat for Oles.

A casual charm is accomplished by the mixture of stone best Roman woods on furniture and Spanish accessories. The party table with several chairs, bench, rose pool with black vinyl cushions, accessories, rug and black and red stripe by Cuban Craft make this a show place. There is a convenient serving and food preparation area with a small stove, refrigerator and other needed appliances.

Webb's elegant boudoir is given an extremely feminine look by the use of pink and French decor.

Alumni Banquet Plans Are Now Underway

Plans for the May 17 Alumni banquet are underway, according to Dr. R. E. Coeblen, director of alumni affairs.

A Jan. 30 meeting at the college brought the officers, directors, endowment director, and the faculty alumni committee together for the purpose of appointing working committees. Committees formulated were nominating, program, documenting, promotion and news. People appointed to these committees are being notified and asked if they will serve. Those who accept will soon meet in a joint session at the campus to see how best to accomplish their assigned tasks and to avoid any overlapping of duties.

A major topic of the session was "ways of better serving this area through alumni participation." It was agreed that quarterly meetings would benefit cohesion and organization. The meeting was set for the fourth Saturday in January, April, July, and October at 10:30 a.m. in the conference room of the Webb Administration Building. It will terminate with lunch at the college cafeteria and perhaps a brief visit to any area of the campus which interests the group at the time of the meeting.

Alumni Chapter Presidents are invited and urged to take part in these meetings.
